Thank You!

Dear Mr. Kivett,

National Cancer Survivors Day is an emotional time not only for cancer survivors and their loved ones, but also for those of us who work to save lives from this disease. It is also an excellent time to celebrate the progress we are making in eliminating cancer as a major health problem.

The fact is that more people are surviving cancer than ever before. More than 10 million Americans are cancer survivors thanks in part to the American Cancer Society's relentless campaign to fund research for groundbreaking treatments and to build public awareness of early detection methods. The Society has a long history of pushing for new ideas that save lives.

We fought for public acceptance of the Pap test, which has resulted in a 70-percent drop in cervical cancer cases and deaths in the last decades. We funded bold new research that led to improvements in childhood cancer survival and new treatments like Gleevec, which extends life and controls cancer with little or no side effects. But we haven't stopped there. Cancer survivorship means much more than just staying alive. The Society was the first organization to also focus on survivorship and quality of life issues.

We've helped thousands of people navigate through the cancer experience – from diagnosis through to post-treatment – while providing the latest cancer information so cancer patients and their loved ones can make the most informed decisions. And it is your generous support which has made it possible. Because of people like you, cancer survivors can hope to lead richer, fuller lives. Thank you again for your commitment to our mission.

Sincerely,

Stephen F. Sener, MD
